The minor rewriting of these chapters and their complete retyping to make the editorial corrections suggested by the Historical Staff is now the big job facing us as soon as word to go ahead. He has asked me to hold up temporarily until he can show the manuscript to other members of the Historical Staff. Given the outstanding clerical and typing support I have been getting from secretary, I estimate this job can be done

The writing of Chapter V, Administering to the Human Side, has been completed and the chapter is now being typed for submission to the Historical Staff shortly.

has been disrupted by 4. The master index which I made in the revision and by changes in page numbers and the like. This item, which I consider extremely important, must await the final draft and will therefore be dealt with at that time. Retirement of documents can begin as the final typing proceeds and will be done in close collaboration with Messrs
